

Solar power generation in the western desert

CE UN38.3 MSDS

Overview

Summary: This presentation describes research on soil and plant communities impacted by utility-scale solar energy (USSE) development in the Desert Southwest, USA. Here we use state-of-the-art Earth system model simulations to investigate how large photovoltaic solar farms in the Sahara Desert could impact the global cloud cover and solar generation potential through disturbed atmospheric teleconnections. The results indicate negative impacts on solar. The Desert Sunlight Solar Farm is a 550- megawatt (MW AC) fixed-tilt photovoltaic power station approximately 6 miles (9.7 km) north of Desert Center, California, United States, in the Mojave Desert. It is developed using First. A presentation titled, "Solar energy in the desert: Ecological impacts of utility-scale photovoltaic facilities in the rapid renewable energy transition" by Claire Karban, USGS, Seth Munson, USGS, Jeffrey Lovich, USGS Emeritus, Lara Kobelt, BLM, Juan Pinos, University of Nevada Las Vegas, Matt. On the ground, it represents something more significant: the steady evolution of utility-scale solar from a niche technology to a central component of America's generating fleet. The Mesquite Solar Complex began in 2011 and has grown through five sequential development phases.
